Learning-teaching methods	The Master' Programme in European Studies is based on a variety of teaching methods: discussion, teamwork, problem-based learning, case analysis, brainstorming, EU simulation and mock trial, presentations, webinars, mixed learning or distance learning as separate e-learning elements.

The training courses are interactive and focused on understanding theory and practice. During their studies, Masters students often have to take tests consisting of case analysis and closed questions in order to better understand the subject matter and to be able to adapt to European standards of practice.

Lecture-seminars are the main method of teaching the program. During the semester, students are required to prepare theoretical material, complete various assignments in the form of tests, exercises or otherwise. At lectures, they have the opportunity to take part in debates and discussions. During one course, the academic staff uses several teaching methods simultaneously. Especially noteworthy is the problem-based teaching method, which is becoming increasingly relevant.

One of the most important components of the study process at the Institute for European Studies is the simulation of the EU, which in turn is an innovative way of conveying knowledge about the EU to students, because it is the way providing a correct understanding of the concept of European integration itself and the phenomenon of cultural diversity in the EU. In addition, students develop important skills such as oratory, refined writing style, negotiation and problem-solving skills. By organizing various mock trials, students become better acquainted with the environment that exists in international organizations or courts.

Students are given one midterm writing test during the semester, which is assessed by the professor with the appropriate score. However, students usually have to prepare a presentation. For this each student is given a specific topic to prepare and present to the audience. During the presentation, students engage in discussion, ask interesting questions, and receive answers from the presenter student. In the absence of an unambiguous answer, students come to certain conclusions through reasoning. Prior to the presentation, students prepare a written overview of the topic to be discussed. The review covers the main issues of the discussion, their findings and conclusions, which they made during the process of processing the issue, as well as various statistics. All students are required to participate in discussions about the EU and its institutions. Students will analyze the situation in the EU, the problems facing its institutions; also, they review the process of developing policies and regulations of the EU as a supranational entity and issues of its implementation, both internationally and nationally.

All activities have an individually selected learning method that helps the course supervisor to achieve a specific outcome. However, after the generalization, a common approach is outlined - the so-called format of lectures-seminars. In particular, the preparation of reading material is mandatory before coming to the lecture. At the beginning of the lecture-seminar, the first 10-15 minutes are devoted to discussing the most important aspects of the pre-read material, after which the lecturer moves on to explaining the issue to be discussed during the day and highlights the main aspects. An integral part of this process is the active participation of the student in the discussion in order to further specify the main issues and deliver them to the student.

Prior to the start of the course, students will be provided with complete literature from readers prepared by the professor, as well as from the Institute for European Studies and the TSU Library. Students actively use the latest technologies in the learning process and Internet tools designated for group work.

In addition, within the framework of the EU Tempus project "Innovative Teaching and Learning of European Studies" (INOTLES 543955), an Innovative Training Center was established at the TSU Institute for European Studies, which aims to introduce innovative teaching methods over time (simulation method, problem-based teaching, e-learning, mixed training) in the training process. At this stage, the simulation method is actively used in the following courses: EU law; EU Law and Investment; International Investment Law and Human Rights, International Dispute Resolution, International Commercial Arbitration (Prof. Natia Lapiashvili); Governance and Policy Making in the EU; Theories of European Integration; Theory of Law; Social, Economic and Cultural Rights - Universal, Regional (Council of Europe, EU) and Constitutional Protection" (Nino Lapiashvili); The Art of Negotiation (Tornike Nozadze).

The use of e-learning component depends on the will of the students and is an additional learning resource for them. At this stage, the following e-lecture courses are available on the website of the TSU Institute for European Studies: 1. Social Policy and Multicultural Processes in Europe (Prof. Ia Natsvlishvili); 2. Statistics (Prof. Kartlos Kachiashvili); 3. EU law (Prof. Natia Lapiashvili); 4. Economics of EU integration (Prof. Merab Abdaladze); 5. European Human Rights Law (Prof. Konstantine Korkelia); 6. Public Policy and Sustainable Development – EU Example (Prof. Farhad Mukhtarov).

During the Covid-19 pandemic, the academic and administrative staff of the TSU Institute for European Studies was fully prepared to meet the transition to electronic and mixed format teaching. Thus, an e-learning format is considered as one of the alternatives when needed.

Assessment system

The level of student achievement in the implementation of the Master's Programme in European Studies is assessed in accordance with the assessment system approved by the Order #3 of January 5, 2007 of the Minister of Education and Science of Georgia "On the Rule of Calculation of Credits for Higher Education Programmes".

The assessment of the level of achievement of student learning outcomes in the curriculum component of the European Studies Master's Programme includes forms of assessment - student independent work, midterm grade (single or multiple) and semester final assessment, the sum of which is the final assessment (100 points).

Midterm and final assessment (assessment forms) includes the assessment component / components, which determines the student's knowledge and / or skills and / or competencies assessment method(s) (oral/written test, oral/written survey, homework, practical / theoretical work, etc.). ). The assessment component combines uniform assessment methods (test, essay, demonstration, presentation, discussion, practical / theoretical assignment, working in a group, participating in a discussion, simulation, solving a case, participating in a simulated process, etc.). Assessment method (s) is measured by the assessment criteria or unit of measurement of the assessment method, which determines the level of achievement of learning outcomes.

Each form and component of the assessment has been determined a share from the total scores (100 scores) in the final assessment, which is reflected in a specific syllabus and is communicated to the student at the beginning of the semester.

Prerequisite for admission to the final exam is defined in the syllabus of the relevant course, and the final exam is considered passed if the student received 50% of the maximum score for the exam (additional conditions are determined by the syllabus of the relevant course)

The assessment system combines five types of positive assessment:

- a) (A) Excellent -91-100 scores;
- b) (B) Very good –81-90 scores of maximal assessment;
- c) (C) Good 71-80 scores of maximal assessment;
- d) (D) Satisfactory 61-70 scores of maximal assessment;
- e) (E) Sufficient 51-60 scores of maximal assessment;

And two types of negative assessment:

f) (FX) Not passed - 41-50 scores of maximal assessment, which means that the student needs more work to pass the exam; he/she is given the right to take additional exam once more with independent work;

	g) (F) Failed - 40 scores or less of maximal assessment, which means that the work carried out by the student is not enough and he/she has to study the subject from the beginning.
	The interval between the final and additional exam shall be not less than 5 calendar days.
	Credit is awarded to a student only upon receipt of a positive assessment.

	• Tuition for the Programme for the purposes of the dual degree Master's Programme is set in agreement with the relevant university.
Human and material	TSU professors, associated and assistant professors, support and administrative resources required for the	staff participate in the implementation of the Master's Programme, also, implementation of the	specialists with relevant qualifications invited by the TSU Institute for European program	Studies.
	The interdisciplinary and interfaculty Institute for European Studies is equipped with modern equipment (including three projectors) and renovated 252 square meters of space with three classrooms, including a conference room, three offices for administrative staff and a library.

	The book fund of the library of the TSU Institute for European Studies was originally purchased immediately upon establishing the Institute – in 2007 within the framework of the European Commission TACIS project. In the next phase, the library was significantly renovated under the EU-funded ENPI project in 2012-2014. In addition, in 2017, a fundamental renewal of the library's book fund was carried out within the framework of the EU Tempus INOTLES project. The renewal of the library's book fund in the following years was carried out with the proceeds from economic activities carried out by the TSU Institute for European Studies.
	Due to the interdisciplinary nature of the Programme, material resources of the faculties of Law, Economics and Business, Social and Political Sciences and Humanities are also used in its implementation. Students have unrestricted access activities of the TSU Institute for European Studies.

Additional information	The Master's Programme in European Studies was established in 2007 within the
(If necessary)	framework of the EU-funded TACIS project (TACIS / 2006/119115). The Institute for European Studies administers the Programme, offers elective courses to students from various faculties of TSU, introduces and disseminates innovative methodologies for teaching and learning in the field of European Studies.
	The decision to award the academic degree of Master of European Studies is made by the Board of the Faculty of Law of TSU.

Integrated parts of the Master's Programme in European Studies are the Dual Degree Master's Programme, which is implemented under a cooperation agreement with the University of Vilnius, and the Regional Master's Programme, which is implemented through a Memorandum with the Yerevan State University.

The regional Master's Programme "Human Rights and Democratization" is part of the ongoing global campus under the auspices of the European Commission, which is implemented worldwide. The Programme is coordinated by Yerevan State University (Republic of Armenia) in the South Caucasus region and includes Ivane Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University (Georgia), Belarus State University (Republic of Belarus) and Taras Shevchenko National University of Kyiv (Ukraine) as partner universities.

The implementation of the Master's Programme started in 2015 and the TSU Institute for European Studies hosts each spring semester of the academic year and provides specially adapted interdisciplinary courses for the Programme students. Information about the mandatory courses offered under this Programme is indicated in the attached curriculum.

The dual degree Master's Programme is implemented in cooperation with the University of Vilnius (Republic of Lithuania). Applicants with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, who are successfully enrolled in the Master's Programme in European Studies may, if desire, have the opportunity to enroll in the Master's Programme in International and European Law at Vilnius University, faculty of Law and after completing the mandatory and elective components of both Programmes, to obtain, on the one hand, the academic degree of Master of European Studies from Ivane Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University and, on the other hand, degree of Master of Laws from Vilnius University. The dual degree Master's Programme is based on this document and the cooperation agreement between the TSU and Vilnius University for the implementation of Master's Programme. Information on the training and research components for the purposes of the Dual Degree Programme is provided in the attached curriculum as well as in the Annex N1 to the Cooperation Agreement: "Integrated Curriculum". The implementation of the Programme will start from the 2022-2023 academic year.
